The Alabama Cattlemen's Association has reached a record membership of 13,200, making it the world's largest cattlemen's association, according to E. H. "Ham" Wilson, Executive Vice President.

"We are very pleased with our membership totals," said Harold Johnson, Reeltown, ACA President. "More important, however, we are proud of the role our association has played in making cattle a billion dollar industry in the state."

Wilson pointed out that Alabama is one of the fastest growing beef cattle states in the nation and now has two million head of cattle and nearly one million head of beef brood cows.

He said income from the sale of cattle and calves in Alabama this year was expected to reach a record $160 million.

Local Hunter Kills White Quail

Cecil Kidd is shown holding a quail that was almost entirely white. The bird, killed Saturday, had a brown "typical quail" pattern on his wings but feathers were predominantly white. Two other quail that Kidd killed from the same covey carried the normal quail markings.

Kidd told the Clipper that he had seen the white bird on Tuesday of last week while hunting on his father-in-law's farm (James A. Hudson) near Danley's Cross Roads. Consumers Want to Know

by MARGARET SPADER
Director of Consumer Affairs
National Association of Manufacturers

Are imitation foods inferior in nutritive value to natural foods?

Not necessarily. If jam or jelly is made with less sugar than required by the standard of identity, it must be labeled "imitation" because it does not conform to the recipe set by law. Another example is regular margarine. It must contain at least 80 per cent fat; imitation margarine has only 40 per cent, making it lower in calories.

Food packages seem to be getting harder to open. Does industry think of the consumer when designing packages?

Manufacturers have given considerable thought to opening and closures on food packages. But they must also design packages strong enough to resist breakage. A food package must keep the contents fresh, be moisture-proof and leakproof. It must be easy to store and carry. Tear strips and pressure areas are often indicated on a package to facilitate opening. Consumers are advised to examine packages carefully as instructions for opening and resealing are usually indicated on the label.

Senator Sparkman Answers

Questions From Readers

Question: Just recently the Economic Development Administration approved a loan to provide 350 new jobs in Montgomery, Alabama. What was the nature of this loan? Sparkman: The loan was from the Economic Development Administration, as you said. The amount was $2,100,000 to help establish a plant to produce coils for the air conditioning industry. The loan went to the Industrial Development Board of the City of Montgomery and was used to help build a plant for Thermal Components, Inc. About 350 of the employment will go to people who are either unemployed or underemployed in the Montgomery-Frattville area.

Question: The Department of the Interior recently approved an Alabama landmark for inclusion in the National Registry of National Landmarks. Where is this landmark?

Sparkman: The Department of the Interior approved Sheila Cave in Madison County as a National Landmark. The site is owned by the Huntsville Groves of the National Speleological Society. It includes a large underground lake, noted for its variety of aquatic life, some species of which exist only in Sheila Cave.

Question: The growing Federal paperwork load in Phase II of the President's Economic Plan is not making it any easier for the small businessman or the consumer. What are you doing about it? Sparkman: I took a whack at the Federal paperwork load recently and it resulted in small retailers having less paper work than anticipated. In compliance with Phase II economic regulations, at a Joint Economic Committee hearing recently I urged Dr. C. J. Grayson, Chairman of the President's Price Commission, to do something to relieve the burden of compliance with Phase II restrictions placed on small businessmen. Shortly afterwards, Chairman Grayson phoned and advised me that the Commission had just adopted a new regulation affecting small retailers (those grossing less than $100,000 annually). Under this regulation such retailers would be required to post only the prices on the top 40 sale items in their stores, or those items accounting for 50% of their gross business, whichever is less. Virtually all complaints that have come to me have been voiced by small businessmen who are finding it nearly impossible to comply with Phase II rules and regulations. The effect of this new regulation will be to make it possible for small retailers to comply with these regulations without becoming immersed in a pile of red tape and paper work. This results in a savings for the small retailer that will have a favorable effect on prices to consumers.

Questions and Answers

Internal Revenue Service

Q - What kind of price increases are permitted during Phase II?

A - The basic policy set by the Price Commission is that price increases will not be allowed except as justified on the basis of cost increases in effect on or after November 14, 1971, taking into account productivity gains. While price increases, in the aggregate, must not exceed 2 1/2 per cent per year, many adjustments will be below 2 1/2 per cent, and some will be above this figure as justified by cost increases and other factors. Price increases will not be granted to any individual or firm to compensate for losses from increased costs that couldn't be passed on during the August 16-November 13 freeze.

Q - How do these rules apply to manufacturers and service industries?

A - Prices charged by manufacturers, service industries and professions may not be increased over freeze standard established at 5.5 per cent.

Q - How are retail and wholesale prices controlled?

A - Retail and wholesale prices are controlled on the basis of customary initial percentage markups which are applied to the cost of the merchandise or service. These customary initial percentage markups cannot be higher than those in the recent past. However, a firm may not increase its prices above its net profit rate before taxes (as a percentage of sales) to a level greater than that in the base period.

Draft Deferment Deadline Set For December 31, 1971

Young men wishing to drop draft deferments in favor of I-A Classification may still do so, and thus possibly shorten their draft liability.

Registrants with Random Selection Number 126, or higher, and who have been deferred, may drop their deferments prior to December 31, 1971, and have only a brief exposure to draft call. If not called prior to December 31, 1971, they would then drop into a lower category on January 1, 1972.

This does not apply to registrants who are members of the Extended Selection Group. The rule applies only to registrants born in 1951, or earlier, who were placed in the second priority position, because of this, they were not subject to induction until the manpower supply in the first priority group was exhausted, a development which might occur in 1972.

Included are six categories: 1-S, high school students; 2-A, occupational deferments or vocational technical students; 2-G, agricultural deferments; 2-D, divinity students; 2-S, undergraduate college students; and 3-A, hardship deferments.

However, men with numbers 125 or lower, who are not drafted by December 31, 1971, will have their prime liability for induction extended to March 1, 1972. Most are expected to be drafted because the new National Uniform Call will bring in men nationwide by the same numbers.

This policy was first instituted in late 1970 and was of particular interest to young men with lottery numbers (RSN) above the highest RSN called for induction. By dropping their deferments at the end of the year, they became part of that year's prime selection group.

In January 1 of that year they were placed in the second priority position, because of this, they were not subject to induction until the manpower supply in the first priority group was exhausted, a development which might occur in 1972.

Included are six categories: 1-S, high school students; 2-A, occupational deferments or vocational technical students; 2-G, agricultural deferments; 2-D, divinity students; 2-S, undergraduate college students; and 3-A, hardship deferments.

Enjoy It While You Have It

Many graduates are seen in our halls and at football games. Often these are the ex-students who vowed they would never return. Then why do they? It's because they miss Elba. They miss the activity periods, the lunch breaks, club meetings, assemblies, jokes in class, kidding with teachers, new learning experiences, and most of all they miss being with their class mates and friends. They are all a very important part of Senior High School. They make up the memories. You have these days now. Hold on to them, notice what's around you. Don't think you are too cool, too sophisticated or too old. You're not, you are only a high school student no matter what you think. There is nothing degrading about it. It's your life now so make the most of it. It will never be the same again. Concluded 1972. Until that date, a retailer may choose not to post base prices.

If a retailer chooses not to post the prices, he cannot raise his prices, Baptist continued. In this instance, he must post a sign on each floor of his business announcing the availability of base price information. The sign must have minimum measurements of 22 by 28 inches and should read as follows:

Information regarding the lawful base price for any item sold by this store not posted may be obtained by filling in a Base Price Information Request Form available at (specify location) and by handing it to (fill in). You will receive a speedy answer by mail.

If the retailer chooses this option, Baptist said he must furnish his own request forms and respond to each written request within 48 hours.

Posting requirements are spelled out in the Federal Register (Volume 36, 13 and are available for 20 cents by writing the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. 20402.

HOLIDAY HELPERS
Look ahead—we're almost ready for season's greetings and good cheer which abounds at this time of year with food as the mainstay of most of the festivities. A big help to holiday menu planners will be the foods listed as continuously available in the processing methods to be sure that massive destruction of food nutrients doesn't occur.

There is some nutrient loss during processing, but today's methods result in less destruction than processing some years ago. Many of today's frozen foods have a higher nutrient content than their counterparts in cans.

No one food is able to meet all of an individual's daily nutritional needs. Therefore, a variety of foods must be eaten each day. So it's still a good guide to select foods on the basis of their nutritional value before they are processed.

MEAL PLANNING
What will you eat for dinner tonight? It doesn't matter whether it's frozen corn, canned spaghetti sauce or dehydrated meat—these foods are made possible by different processing methods.

Some people are concerned that food processing destroys much of the nutritive value and leaves only empty calories in the form of sugar, carbony-
